

Personal Reflections: Inaugural Gateway Voyage Virtual Retreat

by Lori Jacobwith, Monroe Institute Director of Development and Partnerships

We met through a box on the computer screen. ... Fifteen souls at various places in our voyage of self-discovery. Something powerful had drawn us together as we chose to enroll in the first “Gateway Voyage Virtual Retreat.” Read More

We've All Gone Virtual

by Scott Taylor, President & Executive Director

You have heard us talking for three months about how to thrive through the pandemic. Your enthusiastic response has been a tremendous encouragement. Almost 100,000 people have used our free meditations since March.

As you may know, we’ve been offering online programs for a few years. Now, with health safety directing us, we’re working quickly to expand our online programs. Read More.

Mining Monroe—Confessions of an Archivist

by Susan Smily, Monroe Professional Association Coordinator and Monroe Archivist

While I was in the middle of my Gateway in 1999, I received guidance that I had to share what I was experiencing, that I had to become an Outreach Trainer. Part of that process involved delving into research studies and anecdotal reports from people who had also felt the magic. Read More.

As a new consciousness explorer, I had a breathtaking journey ... I experienced incredible joy, peace, healing and love. If you, too, have had a profound life-changing experience during a Monroe program, I'd love to hear from you, email me!
